I dunno which one was the one that made me a Fanwing, but I would probably say it was the 4rth or 5th one that I accually started diving into the stuff instead of just thinking that wings of fire was just a book to read and that's all.

For me it was the first book as well. My friend recommended the series to me but I quickly forgot about it. A year later when I was cleaning my room I found The Dragonet Prophecy under my bed. I have no clue when I had gotten the book, but I read the back and fell in love with just reading that small bit. The second I started the prologue, I couldn't take my eyes off it. Best book series OF ALL TIME. I have read the whole series multiple times. I'm so excited for book 12! Woohoo!

Back in the day, I had a friend who was really into WoF. But I didn't really get the chance to read it till I moved away. I was walking through the library when I saw the first book on a shelf, and thought, ' I need to read this for him'. I picked it up, started reading, and now I've read all but the 11th book and the winglets.

Which book made you a FanWing?

dragonbook641

Definitely Book six.It was the first Wings Of Fire book that I ever read, and continues to be my favorite book since I read it (four or five years ago). I own every book in the series and honestly, was inspired by the author (Thanks, Tui T. Sutherland! I love your books!) and the books to write a few books of my own. Speaking of which, can kids publish books on this website? Also, if I could meet Tui, I would literally explode because I love her books so much.I'm serious guys.Stop laughing.

~ Valerie (dragonbook641)
P.S. Seriously, does anybody know if a kid can publish books on this site?Let me know please.
